

Formosa Industries

January 22, 2025

Re: Conflict Minerals Information for Formolene® Polyethylene Products

Dear Valued Customer:

This letter documents Formosa Industries Corporation's compliance with Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") requirement 17 CFR 240 and 249(b) related to conflict minerals reporting. The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act is a regulatory provision, one targeted at eliminating funding for armed groups in the eastern Democratic Republic of Congo. Armed groups there finance themselves through trade in four main minerals: tin, tantalum, tungsten and gold, used in technological products sold worldwide, including mobile telephones, laptop computers and digital video recorders. The conflict minerals provision is a disclosure requirement that calls on publically-traded companies to determine whether their products contain conflict minerals, by carrying out supply chain due diligence, and to report this to the SEC.

Formosa Industries Corporation is not a publically traded company, thus is not subject to SEC reporting requirements under 13(a), or 15(d) and the conflict minerals reporting rule.

Nevertheless, conflict minerals are not components in our Formolene® polyethylene products. These products are composed mainly of ethylene sourced in the United States and manufactured by Formosa Industries Corporation in the United States. Please note that we do not conduct routine conflict minerals testing of these products, nor any additives that may be used in their production.

If you have any further questions, please contact your Sales or Customer Service representative.

Sincerely,

/s/

Michael Stringer

Product Stewardship Specialist – Product Stewardship
Environment, Safety, & Communications Division

IMPORTANT NOTICE:

The information and statements herein are believed to be reliable but are not to be construed as a warranty or representation for which we assume legal responsibility. Users should undertake sufficient verification and testing to determine the suitability for their own particular purpose of any information or products referred to herein. NO WARRANTY OF FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE IS MADE.